Care, Connection & Community

About

North Carolina Adult Day Services Association

The North Carolina Adult Day Services Association (NCADSA) is a non-profit trade association that was established in 1978. NCADSA serves as the central voice for adult day service providers and their customers in North Carolina, promoting the availability, accessibility, quality and cost effectiveness of adult day services in North Carolina.

NCADSA member centers provide innovative programs that support individuals with physical or cognitive disabilities in a safe environment during the day, as well as their families. Individuals attending day centers often include persons with Alzheimer's disease or related dementias, intellectual or developmental disabilities, heart disease, diabetes, Parkinson's disease and those recovering from strokes.

There are 94 certified adult day centers (includes PACE Centers) located among 46 counties in North Carolina. With an overall capacity to serve over 5,800 participants per day, over 900 employees make it possible for people who need supervised care or assistance to continue living in their homes and communities for as long as possible.
